

An Inventory of Published Soil Surveys of the United States.

Helen Smith, Agricultural Sciences Librarian, Pennsylvania State University (hfs1@psu.edu)

Jen Kirk, Government Documents Librarian, Utah State University (jen.kirk@usu.edu)

In order to facilitate the discovery, management, preservation, access, and use of soil surveys, an inventory of known print surveys was completed in the spring of 2020. The inventory should also allow those librarians interested in providing access to coverage for their regions to identify relevant materials.

The inventory was created by using the Soil Surveys by State (n.d.) site, an index of publications from the Bureau of Soils (Holman et al., 1939), the List of published soil surveys (1994) from the Soil Conservation Service, reviewing the collections at several land grant universities, and searching various digital repositories. Entries were also checked against the Government Publishing Office (GPO) Catalog of Publications to determine if they were distributed through the Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP). To be included in this inventory the survey had to contain a map of the location, and be about soil types in general (not, for example, about soil types for a specific crop).

Brief history of the publication of soil surveys

Printed soil surveys were the main source of soils information up until 2005. Since the first soil survey published in the United States in 1900 (covering the work done in 1899), the number of print surveys has grown to over 5000. Most were published by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) in cooperation with state agricultural experiment stations or departments of agriculture. In some instances states published their own surveys independently. The USDA surveys began as a series and the volumes were published in the year following the work, so the 1st annual publication for the year 1899 was published in 1900. As the years went on, publishing came later and later and by the 1950s surveys were often officially published five to eight years after their assigned year. Most of the surveys were distributed to libraries through the U.S. Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP) but can be difficult to locate since they are not always fully cataloged, may be cataloged only as a series, or may be published by the state (also as part of a series). There were three basic bibliographic series from the USDA prior to 1966 when the surveys began to be published as individual monographs. Each carried its own idiosyncrasies.

1899-1900

Field operations of the Division of Soils / by Milton Whitney, chief of Division of Soils Published: Washington, D.C. : G.P.O., 1900-[1901] 1st (1899)-2nd (1900): Report for each year issued in two volumes: text, and portfolio

Most U.S. Libraries use this cataloging: <http://www.worldcat.org/oclc/893935040>

Common SUDOC No: A 26.5:year

Surveys in this series were published as chapters in one volume, with the maps coming in a second (portfolio) volume. They were published in the year following the report date, so the 1st annual publication for the year 1899 was published in 1900, and the 2nd report year of 1900 was published in 1901. To find the survey for a particular county or parish you need the page numbers of the written report, plus which map (or maps) pertained to that survey. For example, the survey for Kent County Maryland is in the 1900 report, published in 1901, on pages 173-186, and the corresponding map is #6.

1901-1928

Field operations of the Bureau of Soils / by Milton Whitney, chief. At head of title: U.S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Soils. Published: Washington, D.C.: G.P.O., 1902-1928. 3rd (1901)-24th (1922). Report for each year issued in two volumes: text, and portfolio.

Most U.S. Libraries use this cataloging OCLC record: <http://www.worldcat.org/oclc/866781273>

Common SUDOC No: A 26.5:year

At the start of this series the only real difference is that the “Division of Soils” has become the “Bureau of Soils”. Starting in 1905, the actual published year became two to three years after the report year instead of just one. And by the 1922 report they were six years behind. This created quite a delay in the publishing of a report, since all the reports were published as one volume. To alleviate this issue, surveys were often released individually as “Advance Sheets – Field Operations of the Bureau of Soils”, and the publication date of these could be between the assigned year and the actual year. For example, the soil survey of Henry County Tennessee was officially published in the 1922 volume, pages 77-109 (plus map #3), published in 1928. But an “advance sheet” copy has a publication date of 1925. Some libraries may have only the full volumes of the “Field Operations” but others may have the individual advance sheets, especially for their own state or geographic area.

1928-1966

Soil survey (Washington, D.C.) Published: [Washington, D.C.]: U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, 1928-1966. Ser. 1923, no. 1-ser. 1963, no. 1. Issued 1928-Oct. 1939 by the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils; Dec. 1939-Nov. 1943 by the Bureau of Plant Industry; Nov. 1943-Jan. 1953 by the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils, and Agricultural Engineering; Feb. 1953- by the Soil Conservation Service. Prepared in cooperation with the various State agricultural experiment stations and other State agencies.

Most U.S. Libraries cataloging this as a series are on this OCLC record:

<http://www.worldcat.org/oclc/976895728>

Common SUDOC No: A 26.5:year/no

Now the surveys are listed in their own right, not as ‘field operations’. The name of the agency publishing them varies depending on the organization of the USDA at the time of publication, culminating in 1953 with the Soil Conservation Service (later named the National Resources Conservation Service, NRCS). Each survey is issued independently and generally has the title “Soil Survey of...” The surveys are still issued as part of a series titled “Soil Survey” and consisting of a year (starting with 1923) and then a number. There is no consistency in the number of surveys per year, varying from 1 to 48. Right from the beginning the series year does not correspond to the actual publication year. The first survey in this series, 1923 #1, Clark County Iowa, was published in 1928. The final survey published in this series, 1963 #1, was Tippah County Mississippi published in 1966. Surveys were also not published in series order and seemed to come randomly. At this time many libraries cataloged the surveys as separate monographs, which may or may not have included the series information, especially if they were collecting only those important to their specific geographic area. Some libraries however kept them as a series and users would need to know the series year and number in order to find a specific survey.

1966-2004

Surveys from 1966 until 2004 were published as monographs, generally with the title “Soil Survey of...” Although sometimes advance (or draft) copies were made available locally. These surveys are cataloged as individual monographs, generally in the S500 areas for Library of Congress classification and the 500s for Dewey Decimal classification, and SuDoc No: A 57.38:

2005 –

The USDA phased out the printing of reports in 2005, making the Web Soil Survey (<https://websoilsurvey.nrcs.usda.gov/app/>) the official source for soil data. This online app has soil maps and data for most of the nation’s counties and allows you to create custom reports by selecting a specific area of interest and is the definitive location of current soil information (Web Soil Survey, n.d.). There are some printed surveys after that date, however they were not widely distributed.

Digital Access Points

Many, perhaps even most, of these historic surveys have been scanned and are available online. The first place to check is the NRCS site Soil Surveys by State (n.d.). These surveys are scanned PDFs and do include the maps, although at the time of this publication most modern browsers do not automatically display PDF bookmarks, which is what provides access to the maps. The current default settings in the Firefox browser do display the maps, and extensions are available for the Chrome browser which will allow the full use of PDF bookmarks. Instructions for viewing and downloading full surveys are available at the NRCS (Where are the maps? n.d.) Other places to look for digital access to the surveys include: HathiTrust (<https://www.hathitrust.org/>), Internet Archive (<https://archive.org/>), Google Books (<https://books.google.com/>), repositories at the land grant university for the state, digital collections in library archives, and repositories for state documents. In some cases the map has been separated from the text of the soil survey and only the map has been digitized, or vice-versa.

Inventory Organization

The inventory contains six columns and the PDF version is organized alphabetically by state, then location, then the year published. There is a .CSV version to facilitate data manipulation.

State: The state where the survey was completed. If a survey covered more than one state it is listed in both.

Location: This is not the actual title of the survey, but rather the main named location followed by any qualifiers (e.g. eastern, or reconnaissance). Usually this is the county or parish where the survey was completed. If the location is listed as "...County area" that generally means the entire county was not surveyed. If the location is listed as "...area" that generally means it includes more than one county or parish, and those locations are listed (if the county/parish information was not obvious from the title of the survey, it is added in brackets). Alaska, which does not have counties, and most National Forest or National Park surveys are the exceptions and do not have counties listed. Reconnaissance surveys of large parts of a state (e.g. northeastern Pennsylvania) also do not list the specific counties.

Year: This is the year the official version of the survey was actually published. Advance Sheets likely have an earlier date than the official version, but that date is not listed. The field work for the survey is likely several years before the year published.

Series Information: For surveys published from 1899 to 1928 this includes the series year and page numbers located in the "Field Operations..." series and the number for the corresponding map. For those surveys published from 1928 to 1966, this includes the series year and number for the "Soil Survey" series.

Additional Information: This column indicates if the survey was also issued as part of an experiment station or state department of agriculture series, or in some cases if this is the only place the report was published (often the case in Illinois and Iowa). In the case of Wisconsin, once the basic fieldwork was completed, each agency commonly published its own unique soil survey report (so they are very similar but have different dates) but in some instances only one report was published, by either the Bureau of Soils or by the Wisconsin Geological and Natural History Survey.

SuDoc: The likely SuDoc number assigned to the survey, if available. Many surveys published since 2004, and those of National Forests or National Parks, do not have official SuDoc numbers as they do not appear in GPO's Catalog of Publications. This number may facilitate the location of surveys that are not fully cataloged and are located in libraries' government document collections. The .CSV version of the inventory includes a "Sort by SuDoc" column to alleviate the difficulties of sorting by an alphanumeric code.
